

Call for Manuscripts

The Journal of Continuing Higher Education

The Journal of Continuing Higher Education (JCHE) announces a Call for Manuscripts for its upcoming issues. JCHE strives to support continuing higher education by serving as a forum for the reporting and exchange of information based on research, observations, and the experience relevant to the field. Issues are published in the winter, spring, and fall. JCHE is published by Routledge.

The Journal of Continuing Higher Education considers two types of articles:

- Major articles—current research, theoretical models, conceptual treatments—of up to 7,000 words on:
 - organization and administration of continuing higher education
 - development and application of new continuing education program thrusts
 - adult and nontraditional students
 - continuing education student programs and services
 - research within continuing higher education and related fields

Manuscripts should have both theoretical and practical implications.

- “Best Practices” articles of up to 4,000 words. These “Best Practice” articles contain descriptions of new, innovative, and successful programs or practices. The programs or practices should be replicable and of significance to continuing education.

For best consideration for the Fall 2010 issue, manuscripts are requested by March 17, 2010. Manuscript submission guidelines are available online at <http://www.informaworld.com/smpp/title~content=t908610301> or through ACHE’s website: www.ACHEinc.org. Potential authors should feel free to consult with JCHE editor James Broomall, University of Delaware. He can be reached at jbroom@udel.edu or (302) 831-2795.

Please share this announcement with colleagues and graduate students who may be interested in submitting manuscripts to JCHE. The Journal has published outstanding graduate student work in the past.
